Ever have one of those really awesome professors? The kind that make you interested in a major when you only wanted to take their class to knock out a requirement? The professor who stays long hours after class, makes lectures interesting, and always responds to your emails in the most helpful way they can?

The Princeton Review teamed up with RateMyProfessor.com for its new book profiling the 300 best college professors in the country

Check out the full list here. The 300 profs aren't ranked in the book, but we took a brief sampling.

Check out our list of the 13 of the best college professors in the country:

Jeremi Suri

 Suri is the most well-spoken Professor I've had at this university. He never makes a mistake and makes his points with a forceful voice. Suri is an unbelievable teacher and I would take any other class offered by him in the future. Only downside of 434 is that he missed several lectures, understandable because he was flying in to Washington.

 My favorite Prof so far at Madison. I have taken both his 434 and 102 classes. Currently in 434 and it is definitely harder but totally worth it. Any trouble and Suri is really approachable and helpful. He makes you think about history instead of just memorizing random facts that seem to mean nothing.

 Take any class offered with Prof. Suri. He is one of the most intelligent men out there and is the greatest professor I've ever had. He brings in new ideas and makes class interesting, he's absolutely amazing.

 This guys is a badass. He knows what he talks about, and he is a very organized lecturer. More professors should learn how to do their job from him!
